

Mr. Peabody and Sherman

Mr. Peabody and Sherman begins with a premise that anyone watching the movie will love. Mr. Peabody is a dog...a dog who has adopted a boy. Mr. Peabody is a genius inventor who has traveled the world. Sherman is a boy who is...an average boy. Mr. Peabody puts his brilliance to work by creating a WABAC time machine and using it to tutor Sherman by flying him through history.

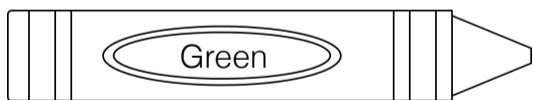

At the present time, Sherman attends the Susan B. Anthony School in New York City. His deeper knowledge of the George Washington cherry tree anecdote (obtained from his canine father, no doubt) leads to a fight with classmate, Penny Peterson in the cafeteria, where she puts him in a half-nelson. Mr. Peabody is called into the principal's office where principal Purdy tells him that Sherman bit Penny. Mr. Peabody is also confronted by Ms. Grunion, a Child Protective Services agent who implies that the behavior exhibited by Sherman in the conflict with Penny is due to the fact that he has been raised by a dog. She plans to investigate Mr. Peabody and Sherman to determine if Mr. Peabody is a fit parent. Mr. Peabody invites Penny and her parents to his home for a dinner party in the hopes of reconciling before Ms. Grunion for claiming first-hand knowledge of history. Despite being told not to touch the time machine by his father, Sherman shows Penny the WABAC. Penny badgers Sherman until he takes her into the past, where she arrives in Ancient Egypt and marries King Tut. Sherman returns to the present day to get Mr. Peabody's help. Mr. Peabody hypnotizes the Petersons, and scoops Penny out of Ancient Egypt by informing her of the fate of King Tut's wife. It looks as if all problems are solved until...the WABAC runs out of power.
